More Money for the NHS and Infra-Structure in The Budget

Rishi Sunak received a “hospital pass” when he was appointed Chancellor and was required to deliver the first Budget in nearly 18 months within a month of his appointment. He announced extra spending on roads, rail, broadband and other infrastructure projects as well as extra money for the NHS to help cope with the coronavirus epidemic. But what we were waiting to hear was where the extra money was going to come from?

Had he found a “magic money tree”, or would tax and borrowing have to increase?

The Office of Budget Responsibility had already downgraded growth forecasts for the UK economy to just 1.1% before the global coronavirus pandemic, which may temporarily plunge the UK into recession.

The Chancellor announced a number of measures that will hopefully protect businesses until the economy recovers.

Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) Relief

The Government are predicting that up to 20% of the workforce may be unable to work due to the virus at any one time. It had already been announced that employees would be entitled to SSP from day 1 not day 4. It was announced in the Budget that the Government will fully reimburse employers with fewer than 250 employees the SSP paid for the first 14 days of absence, equivalent to the self-isolation period.

More Rates Relief for Small Businesses

There has again been much lobbying from the small business sector to reduce business rates to enable traditional retailers in particular to compete with internet traders.

The Chancellor announced a long term review of the future of business rates, but in the meantime there are some very welcome measures to assist small businesses. The 100% business rates retail discount will be extended to the leisure and hospitality sectors where the rateable value is no more than £51,000.

Updated Budget Special | April 2020

In addition, very small businesses who already pay no business rates at all will be able to claim a £3,000 cash grant although this has subsequently been increased to £10,000.

Personal Allowance and Higher Rate Limit Frozen

The personal allowance for 2020/21 is frozen at £12,500, the same as in 2019/20. The higher rate tax threshold is also frozen at £50,000.

No Changes to Income Tax Rates

The basic rate of income tax and higher rate remain at 20% and 40% respectively, and the 45% additional rate continues to apply to income over £150,000.

There had again been rumours that the dividend rate might be increased, but dividends continue to be taxed at 7.5%, 32.5% and then 38.1%, depending upon whether the dividends fall into the basic rate band, higher rate band or the additional rate band. Note that the first £2,000 of dividend income continues to be tax-free.

The annual ISA investment limit increased to £20,000 from 6 April 2017 and remains at that level for 2020/21.

There will be a significant increase in the Junior ISA limit to £9,000 for 2020/21. Despite a thorough review of all tax reliefs by the Treasury, the much rumoured restrictions in pension tax relief again failed to materialise.

Tapering of Pension Annual Allowance

One welcome change, particularly among hospital consultants and GPs, is the increase in the threshold at which the pension annual allowance starts being tapered. From 2020/21 the adjusted income limit will increase from £150,000 to £240,000 which means that most doctors will not be caught by the restriction.

IR35 "Off-Payroll" Rules To Go Ahead And Then Delayed

It was confirmed In the Budget that the new rules for workers providing their services through personal service companies would start from 6 April 2020. However, it has subsequently been announced that the start would be delayed by a year.

This would have represented a significant additional administrative burden on large and medium-sized businesses and would have resulted in more income tax and national insurance being deducted from workers affected.

Updated Budget Special | April 2020

NIC Changes

Employees and the self-employed will not pay national insurance contributions (NIC) on the first £9,500 of earnings from 2020/21, a significant increase from the £8,632 limit in 2019/20. Note that employers will be required to pay 13.8% on earnings over £169 per week, £8,788 per annum.

The employment allowance that can be set against employers NIC increases to £4,000 from 2020/21 but will not be available to employers with total employer's NIC liabilities in excess of £100,000 p.a.

State Benefits Increased

Many State Benefits have been frozen, or increases limited, for a number of years. The Government have however decided to increase many State Benefits from 2020/21 including Child Benefit. The amount payable in respect of the oldest child has been increased to £21.05 and £13.95 for each subsequent child. Note however that you may have to pay a tax charge if one of the parents has income in excess of £50,000.

Since Budget day it has been announced that the rate of Universal Credit available to the self-employed has been increased to £94.25 a week in line with the rate of SSP for employees.

Capital Gains Entrepreneurs' Relief Restricted

There were many rumours in the run up to the Budget that CGT entrepreneurs' relief that allows certain business owners to pay just 10% tax on disposal would be abolished.

Rather than abolish the relief the Chancellor has announced that from 11 March 2020 onwards the relief will only be available against the first £1 million of lifetime gains instead of the previous £10 million limit.

The relief will therefore still benefit most small business owners

Company Tax Rate Frozen At 19%

As previously announced the corporation tax rate is to remain at 19% for the time being. It was scheduled to reduce to 17% from 1 April 2020.

Structures and Buildings Allowance Increased To 3%

As announced in the Conservative Party manifesto the original 2% straight line allowance is to be increased to 3% from 1 April 2020 for companies, 6 April 2020 for unincorporated businesses.

Updated Budget Special | April 2020

R&D Tax Credit Changes

The Conservative Party manifesto also included a promise to increase R&D expenditure relief for non-SMEs from 12% to 13% and this was confirmed in the March Budget. However, a measure originally announced in the 2018 Budget and consulted on in 2019 will limit the amount of repayable R&D tax credit for SMEs to three times the company's total PAYE and NIC payments for the period. This measure will now take effect from 1 April 2021 not 2020.

Extra Support For Those Affected By Coronavirus

Please see our separate newsletter outlining a number of special measures that have been announced since Budget day as a result of the spread of Covid-19.
